DETAILED ACTION

Reasons for Allowance

1. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance: the prior art of Kuroda et. al. (US Patent No. 6,105,286) teach a refrigeration system that contains carbon dioxide, along with heat exchangers, compressors and decompressors. Masahiro et. al. (Japanese Patent No. 2002-081768) teach a refrigerant-to-water heat exchanger. Kuroda et. al. however, don't teach the limitation of having a refrigerant-to-water heat exchanger nor do they teach sequentially connecting the compressor, refrigerant-water heat exchanger, first decompressor, first heat exchanger, internal heat exchanger, second decompressor, and internal heat exchanger. Kuroda et. al. teach don't teach a decompressor between two heat exchangers directly after the compressor. Kuroda et. al. teach the decompressor between two heat exchangers after the refrigerant has gone through other elements in the cycle therefore it won't be as compressed as had it been if it came directly from the compressor. Additionally, Kuroda et. al. do not teach the limitation of a radiator separate from the heater core or a water cycle subsystem which is uniquely taught by the applicant.

Masahiro et. al. teach the refrigerant-water heat exchanger using carbon dioxide as a refrigerant and sequentially connecting the compressor, refrigerant-water heat exchanger, first decompressor and first heat exchanger but then teach cycling the refrigerant back to the compressor (see Fig. 1) and not the internal heat exchanger as claimed by the applicant.

While all of the elements such as refrigerant-water heat exchangers, compressors and decompressor are known to be used for refrigerating cycles it has not been shown to place them sequentially as described in claim 1 lines 24-28 by the applicant and shown in the applicant's drawings. Claim 1 is thus allowable because the prior art of record fails to teach the sequence of refrigeration elements as claimed in claim 1 lines 24-28 or suggest a motivation to placing elements in that particular sequence. Additionally, the prior art of record does not structurally suggest or show having a water and refrigerant cycle as claimed by the applicant.

2. Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and to avoid processing delays should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."
